POSTAL SAVINGS SHOW DECREASE DUE TO HARD TIMES

Total deposits in the United States Postal Savings System on May 1 were about $188,000,000, a decrease during the month of April, it was announced today. This condition, it was explained, is due to unemployment, which also increased during the month of April, causing withdrawal of deposits to meet the emergency.

The number of postal savings stations with more than $100,000 on deposit now totals 141, the largest being New York, with $49,240,237. Total deposits for Washington are $424,114, making this the thirty-fourth city. Baltimore is first, with $303,003, and Norfolk seventeenth, with $209,500.
